Here is a quick and fun way for kids to keep track of their summer reading. The chart can be filled out by first listing the title of the book, then filling in the number of suns that reflect how good the book was (the more suns, the better the book) and finally writing three words that describe the book.

Looking for some fun discussion prompts? Try these Lit Spark Cards. Each card has a different book-related question that can be used with any novel.
